Also, regional ICANN forum meetings, in partnership w ith existing orgs.
Q11: Additional Comments or Suggestions	ICANN needs to be careful to observe its own mission, and to define its activities transparently. It can and should support and build existing capacities, and strenuously avoid building (or being seen to build) an "ICANN empire". This survey is a good start, how ever it is vague as to what is its scope, and in making any distinction between ICANN's own responsibilities, and broader Internet roles and activities which may be already (or better) carried out by others.
